

Where to Dine in HONG KONG: Le Marron – Private Kitchen

November 3, 2009

Had dinner at this really cosy restaurant in Hong Kong. Stashed away in a dodgy apartment block in the middle of the bustling city, this is located in Hong Kong Island itself and is an absolute find! The decor and ambience totally disassociates itself from beyond the 4 walls but rather in perhaps a European country or town. The dim lights and cosy setting really surprised me and I wonder why Singapore doesn't have such random nooks and treasure chests.

There is a minimum spend of about SGD60 per person. The menu is simple and to the point. Perfect for a romantic dinner, or a gathering with friends intimately. Wine and dine with excellent culinary at its best. The foie gras, escargots, steak, pasta...you name it, we ordered, and dish by dish, it didn't disappoint one bit. Everything we ordered stood out and was fantastic in its own right. We had an amazing meal and I was floored.

If you ever do go to Hong Kong, you have to visit Le Marron. It's a must stop. 😊

Categories: Dining in HONG KONG · French · Western · Where to go in HONG KONG

• SHARED FOOD GOSSIPS

▪ 36,578 foodies

BLOG AT WORDPRESS.COM. THEME: CUTLINE.